The Citizen's Interest in Public Spending

GERMANY'S National Socialist party, reviewing the nation's "magical" recovery from war burdens and depression pitfalls, is crowing with all the heils and hochs that the ferment of such a national ego can produce.

And from a distance, Germany seems to have something to crow about. Five years ago, internal troubles and isolation from the outside world threatened complete undoing of the reich. Today, factories are operating overtime, nearly everyone has a job and the Nazi banner carries tidings of reclaimed military and commercial prestige to the seven seas.

Moreover, all this was accomplished through Nazi industry and diligence alone, without foreign aid and in some cases, actually in the face of foreign interference.

Germany, then, would seem to be a good example for other nations which still are struggling with problems of wages, unemployment, budget-balancing and other confusing phases of modern economics. But those other nations—and that includes the United States—had better look closer before they leap.

THE reason is discovered in the foundation that underlies this new miracle skyscraper of German prosperity. In the two years before Adolf Hitler came to power, the state had poured more than 14 billion marks into jobless doles. Hitler continued this spending and added to it the cost of another artificial boom through a vast rearmament program.

These policies put men to work but they boosted the public debt to more than 54 billion marks. They started factories running again but they placed a terrific tax load upon the people.

Behind Nazi boasts of recovery lies the strangling of wages and social welfare benefits and the reduction of employers and employees to the status of "work agents" of the state. In place of the normal law of supply and demand, the government steers economy by decree.

ALL this points toward a cataclysmic explosion, for in Germany's case at least, subsidized prosperity is an investment that yields no economic return and provides no substantial basis for future building.

Therein lies a stern lesson for the United States. Our own government has been involved in some big spending in the name of recovery. Our own taxes are rising. And we are not agreed that our own money, poured into the anti-depression war chest, will yield an equitable economic payoff.

We have not yet equaled the German excesses. And there is much to recommend the principle of "priming and pump." But any good thing can be carried too far, and every American citizen has a personal interest in seeing that his government knows when to stop.

"He Never Knew What Hit Him" insurance with smaller premium payments, and how to cut the corners generally.

Moreover, says Mr. Giles, these savings do not call upon you to give up any of the good things of life. You won't have to make things at home or turn repair man. You needn't grease your car or test tooth paste for your money's worth.

Want to save $36 a year on milk alone? Want to save hundreds of dollars on taxes? Do you know what simple trick makes sheets last 25 per cent longer? Want to save $100 on that next used car you buy? Mr. Giles has spent years finding the answers. And it's not too much to say that every man and woman of moderate means ought to know the answers.—P. F.

OUT OF THE NIGHT

It wasn't pleasant up on the roof at midnight. . . . Tonight it was cloudy, and there was no moon. It would be terrifying all alone up there!

Seven, eight, nine, twenty. . . . If nothing happened in the meantime. Actually, Cilly was thinking: "If Jim doesn't insist on getting married before then." He'd been on the point of it a dozen times, Cilly knew, but something always held him back.

"Oh, Cilly, darling!"—it was Jim who had christened her "Cilly" for her great-grandmother—"Oh, Cilly, if I could only run off with you right this very day. . . . You do love me, don't you, darling? You will wait for me, no matter what happens?"

Wait for him! Hadn't she waited 27 years for someone exactly like Jim Kerrigan? If she waited another thousand years, would she ever find anyone else so utterly dear, so thoughtful, so tender?

Seven, eight, nine, forty. . . . He'd never said exactly just what held him back, but Cilly understood. It was his new job. He had only been in New York a little over six months; he had to make good before he could ask a girl to marry him. She could well afford to be patient. Seven, eight, nine, sixty. . . . Or could she?

FOR the first time since she had known Jim, she felt a little twinge of uncertainty. These past few months it had been just Jim and she—just the two of them together. Dancing at the French Casino. Swimming at Jones Beach. Looping the loop at Coney Island. Cooking hot dogs over a campfire at Hillside Park. Holding hands at the Paramount. Sharing a kiss downstairs in the vestibule. . . . just two people in all New York. Cilly Pierce and Jim Kerrigan.

Until tonight. . . . Until this very evening when she had suggested to Amy that they invite their respective boyfriends for a quiet Sunday morning. "So we can all get to know each other better," she had said to Amy. "Four people can have so much more fun together than just two."

Well, they certainly got to know each other better. Jim and Amy, at any rate. You'd have thought they'd known each other all their lives. The way Amy's eyes lighted up when she introduced them. . . . the where've-you-been-all-my-life look that Jim gave Amy. . . .

Seven, eight, nine, eighty. . . . It was just too bad she couldn't have gone for Amy's date in the same spirit. Harry Hutchins. A loud-mouthed, conceited fool. The sort who can always tell the other fellow how to play bridge. A wise guy.

Cilly marveled that a girl like Amy could have stood his company for one evening. Amy was highly attractive—a girl with charm and poise and good breeding. Surely she could see through the bluff that was Harry Hutchins.

But apparently she didn't. To all appearances, she was completely gone on him. Why, if two days passed without her hearing from him, she'd call him at his hotel. It made Cilly mad.

Once she remarked about it to Amy, not that she had any right to comment. But Amy was such a good-hearted soul; she'd never realize when someone was giving her a raw deal.

"Let him chase you," Cilly had said. "There's more zest to a man when you keep him guessing."

But Amy had just shrugged. "Don't worry about me, Cilly," she replied. "You don't understand this affair between Harry and me."

NO, Cilly didn't understand it. But she understood Harry Hutchins. Only to well. He was the answer to every maiden's prayer—at least he thought so. And poor Amy was just another girl who had fallen prey to his deadly charm.

Cilly knew that Harry had other interests. In greener fields. It was no secret that Harry Hutchins was making a heavy play for Gloria Harmon, whose father had left her a string of chain stores. The Brooklyn rotogravure sections printed photographs of them together—at the races, at the smartest supper clubs in Manhattan, at the Harmon estate on Long Island. Even tonight, he had boasted of spending the previous week-end "down at Harmony Hall."

But all this went over poor Amy's head. Either she had not a bit of jealousy in her makeup, or she had a fortune hope that in time she could win her precious Harry back.

Seven, eight, nine, one hundred. . . .

Cilly put the brush down. Perhaps that was it. Perhaps Amy had been so especially sweet to Jim that Cilly could just make Harry jealous. Cilly couldn't blame her for that.

However, that didn't explain this going up on the roof. And spending half an hour up there.

It wasn't pleasant up on the roof at midnight, not unless the moon rode high in a cloudless sky. Tonight it was cloudy, and there was no moon. It would be terrifying all alone up there!

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

Don't Defer Move Because of School

A good many people will be moving this fall, and the big question is always school. Will John or Mary be put back? Will they be happy making new friends? Will the teachers be as good? All sorts of problems confront the parent who is contemplating a change, so a short discussion may help to allay your fears.

While it used to be a good old American custom to "put back" the new pupil, thus giving an impression of superiority in the latest school, today it is almost obsolete. This is especially true in states like New York, where the universal rating is based upon state-wide regents' examinations that makes one standard for all.

But even in those cities and towns where examinations are still individual to the school, the grade books call for almost the same coverage of work. The idea today is to place the child where he was, until he proves that he is beyond his depth, which seldom happens.

New Friendships Bronten

As for new friends, it is good for a child to "make" them. Of course, it is always a heartbreak to leave the fellows one has known so well for so long, or the girl chums that Mary has learned to love, but we are looking at the cheerful side of it now, and seeking the good.

One makes friends literally. He does it by compelling strangers to accept him, not on his terms, but theirs. Old acquaintances have learned to tolerate and overlook, so now the rough corners of character must be smoothed off. Carelessness or rudeness have to take back seats, and in their place diplomacy and consideration must bait the hook in the new stream.

In turn the stranger in a new land will have to learn that children are children wherever he goes, and he himself must not be too set in his ideas of whom he likes and doesn't like. He will grow broader and bigger by having to make new adjustments to new friends every once in awhile. At first he may have a few battles to fight, as, alas, the intruder may try him out, but this won't hurt him. It is good for him, unless things are too unfair, to have to make his own way.

Teachers Are Variable

Teachers? They come good and poor everywhere, but mostly good. The poor teacher has seen her day. And if, let me whisper this softly, your little Junior has been having a snap of it because he was "John Z. Jones, the Good Citizen's Son," then maybe it will be an experience for the boy to find himself in an environment where he is only Johnny Jones, the boy in the striped sweater.

They all shake down in a few weeks. Move if it suits you. It is hard on the child, but only for a little while. Make it easier for him by keeping in touch with his former cronies, if possible.

Film Love All in Day's Work But It's Still a "Serious" Job

HOLLYWOOD.—Love-making is a pretty serious business, when it is a business. Most screen players take more time composing themselves for a love scene than for a bit of heavy drama. Says Tyrone Power: "Maybe it's because we feel so doggedly silly."

You wouldn't think that Franchot Tone felt silly doing love scenes with Jean Crawford. And maybe he didn't, either. But he behaved very unlike a husband while preparing for romantic sequences in "The Bride Wore Red."

Seemed nervous. And Miss Crawford, when I saw her, anyway, paced up and down twisting a handkerchief and looking as though she were on the verge of tears.

Greta Garbo always likes to do her love scenes near the beginning of a picture. Your guess is as good as anyone's as to the reason. At first thought it doesn't seem very flattering to her leading men that she should prefer being kissed and embraced by them before she even is well acquainted with them.

On the other hand, it has been suggested that there's no quicker way to get acquainted.

Before her love scenes are to be filmed, Miss Garbo takes a day or two off to rehearse in front of a full-length mirror at home. That's what she did for Charles Boyer in "Camille" and for Robert Taylor in "Camille."

Boyer didn't seem in the least flustered, but prior to a shot Taylor always retreated to a remote corner of the stage to commune with his jitters.

Taylor is by no means an exhibitionist in matters amorous. During production of "This Is My Affair" he and Barbara Stanwyck repeatedly botched a clinch while a few people were looking on. Thereafter the set was closed to everybody whenever the stars had to make love before the camera.

Substitute Loveys

Luise Rainer is another who takes these things very seriously. Locks herself in her dressing room for half an hour. Nothing bothers Spencer Tracy, though, nor William Powell.

While making "Double Wedding,"

Powell sometimes sat in the director's chair and bossed a love scene rehearsed by his stand-in and Myrna Loy's stand-in. The two substitutes seemed to enjoy it.

Gladys George is like Helen Hayes in her ability to turn emotions on and off. Unless she's actually learning lines she never builds up a preliminary mood. She can tell a funny story, walk briskly into a scene, and in 10 seconds be drenching her leading man's lapels with tears.

But there is an instant of preparation. Just as the camera turns, Miss George ducks her head, closes her eyes, and seems to say to herself: "This is serious business."

Charles Laughton used to have a remarkable scheme for making himself look romantically ardent. And still does, for all I know. He'd trot around the stage a couple of times and arrive in front of the camera and his lady-love, breathing heavily.

At Lili Stinger

Some of the stars who have to make love in celluloid are not very friendly off-screen. A few are downright antagonistic.

Somewhere in Hollywood there is a strip of film, rarely and privately shown, which reveals the true feelings of a certain leading lady for a certain male star of a few years ago.

They had made a picture together—a difficult and trying piece of drama—and had been recalled for a day of minor retakes. The last shot, which was to be inserted about the middle of the film, showed a parting of the lovers.

He said: "I'm off, my dear. But if ships still sail I will find my way back to you."

She held him close and murmured, "Goodbye—goodbye! Somehow I feel that this is goodbye."

That was supposed to be the end of the shot, but the actress went right on. She said: "Anyway, I hope it's goodbye—you up-stage, good-for-nothing camera-hog!"

Green tea is produced through withering the leaves by steaming them in perforated pans as soon as gathered, and then roasting them for five minutes, thus retaining the green color.

Extracts Are Used to Supplement Work of Parathy-

This is the 19th in a series of 20 articles by Dr. Morris Fishben, dealing with the function of glands in the human body.

(No. 320)

Situated behind the thyroid gland in the throat near the windpipe are two soft, reddish bodies, each about the size of a bean. They are known as the parathyroid glands. When these glands are removed, the person concerned suffers from a condition called tetany.

In tetany there are spasmodic movements, loss of weight, pain and tingling in the hands and feet, cramping in the legs and arms, and other serious symptoms. The hair may fall out and the nails may change. The skin becomes thinner and there is a great deal of excessive perspiration.

The parathyroid glands are concerned with the manner in which the human body uses calcium and phosphorus. Calcium and phosphorus are important in the development of bones and teeth. Calcium in the blood is of importance in controlling the degree of irritability of nerves and muscles. Calcium is important in the clotting of blood.

Since the parathyroid glands are known to have these definite effects on the body by the secretion which they pour directly into the blood, it is now possible to use the parathyroid glandular material for definite purposes in the control of symptoms of disease.

When parathyroid glandular extract is given to the human being by injection, the amount of calcium in the blood is increased and the amount of phosphorus is decreased.

Calcium necessary for the blood is obtained in some cases by withdrawing it from the bones, so it is customary to give extra calcium in the diet or as a drug in order that the bones may not be changed by the excess of calcium taken from them.

It is known also that vitamin D is of importance in controlling the use of calcium by the body. In sufficient amounts, vitamin D will raise the amount of calcium in the blood and increase the absorption of calcium from the intestines.

Chief advantage of parathyroid extract instead of vitamin D on certain occasions lies in the fact that parathyroid brings about an effect more promptly. The effects last about 24 hours after one injection. It is possible, of course, to inject calcium directly into the blood as well.

In certain instances as, for example, in medium poisoning and lead poisoning, the use of parathyroid material will help remove poisonous material from the body.

The function of the parathyroid gland is, however, to preserve a normal nervous system and a normal amount of muscle action. Since the heart is a muscle, a change in the amount of calcium may definitely affect the heart.

When a woman is going to have a child, she must supply the child through her body with the necessary amounts of calcium and phosphorus for its growth. If it is not supplied, the child's body will actually take calcium and phosphorus from the mother's body. For this reason, in earlier days women who were pregnant frequently suffered with decay of the teeth and similar disturbances.

How to Live Better Though Prices Rise

It's going to cost you vastly more to live during the next few years, economists, technical authorities, private and government agencies agree. And the prediction is supported by retail price increases of from 14 to 40 per cent since 1934. In the past year alone retail prices in general have risen 9.2 per cent.

"How to Beat the High Cost of Living" (Simon and Schuster, $1) rolls off the presses, therefore, at an opportune time. In this book, Author Ray Giles points the way to 864 "money savers for everyday use."

"One way—and perhaps your only hope—of counteracting this general rise in prices," says Mr. Giles, "is to manage the family income wisely." Then Mr. Giles goes on to declare that not one family in a hundred regulates and balances its household budget with much success.

So he flings the challenge at you nine amazing chapters; amazing because he tells you how to eat better and save money; how to dress better on less; how to make your shelter dollars go further; how to cut the high cost of heating; how to buy better in-

Life's Drama

"Hello Life," I thought to say
As I got out of bed today,
"Hello World, with all you hold,
Ever young and ever old;
Background for the drama played
Here by men, by passions swayed;
Torn by doubts and hopes and fears,
Glorious setting for our years.
Here beneath a lovely sky
Anxious men go hurrying by,
Seeking something out of strife
To enrich their days of life.
Here amidst a blossomy scene
Some are selfish, some unclean;
But the most of men believe
There are triumphs to achieve.
Trees and fields remain
Back drops for men's loss and gain.
All we are and all we do
Sun and moon in silence view;
Summer roses watch us play,
Watch us put our dead away.
Whoso'er mankind has gone
In life's drama running on,
Fascinated, oft I stand
Watching toil of brain and hand,
Love and hatred, joy and grief,
Saint and sinner, sage and thief;
Frenzied mob and courage great
Battling with the odds of fate;
And, enhanced, I wait to see
What the next great act will be.

The Story of the Constitution

Text by Willis Thornton

Illustrations by Ed Gunder

'Due Process' Comes in as Slavery Goes Out'

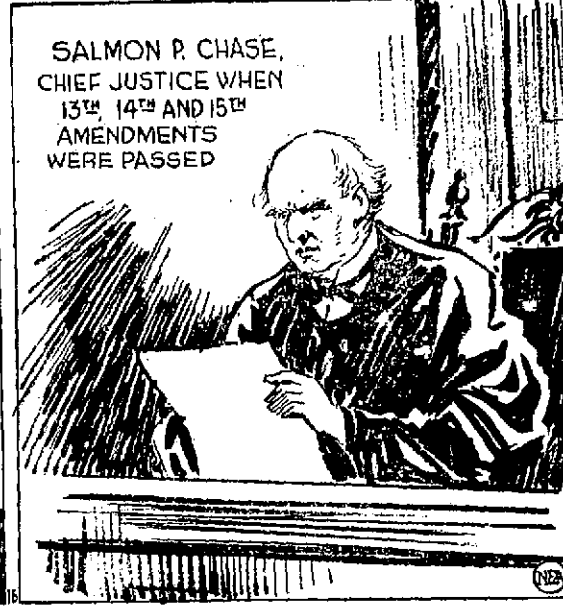

In 1798 another amendment was added, the 11th, providing that states may be sued only in their own courts and according to their own laws. In the election of 1800, Jefferson and Burr were tied for the presidency and vice presidency. The Constitution then provided that candidates for both offices run together. The candidate getting the most votes would be president, the second, vice president.

The tied election was thrown into the House of Representatives. Jefferson won with Hamilton's influence, an underlying cause of the Burr-Hamilton duel. That brought about, in 1804, the 12th Amendment, providing a separate ballot for president and vice president, an obvious mechanical change, and the last amendment to the Constitution that was to be made for 60 years.

After the long war of 1860-65, the 13th Amendment was inevitable, prohibiting slavery. But the 14th (1868) was even more sweeping. Primarily intended to guarantee civil rights to the freedmen, it contained the famous "due process" clause—that no person may be deprived of "life, liberty or property without due process of law," and states may not deny to any the equal protection of the laws.

The "due process" clause has been the subject of interpretation by the courts ever since, and its meaning and implications have been the source of some of the bitterest constitutional arguments. The 15th Amendment, (1870) guarantees that the right to vote may not be taken away because of "race, color, or previous condition of servitude." NEXT: Income tax and the Senate.

Record Crowd at Emmet's Revival

Many Visitors From Adjoining Towns Hear Rev. Bert Webb

"Which Church Is the Right One?" will be the subject of Rev. Bert Webb's sermon Thursday night at the revival service in Emmet. Wednesday night the largest crowd of the week was present and heard the evangelist preach on, "Abram, Get Up and Get Out of Here." During the week visitors have been present in the services from Hope, Prescott and Camden. On Friday night the sermon subject will be, "Don't Take Your Wife's Advice." A male quartet from Hope will sing tonight in addition to the other music and singing by the entire congregation. The public is invited to these services which are being held in the open air in a grove near the Methodist church of Emmet.

CLUB NOTES

Melrose
The Melrose Home Demonstration met on September 13 at 2:30 p. m. at the home of Mrs. Joe Taulbee. The meeting was called to order by the president and was opened by the group singing several selections. Then all the members repeated the woman's creed.

Mrs. C. P. Zimmerly repeated part of the 14th chapter of John and all the members repeated the Lord's prayer in unison led by Miss Bullington. Mrs. Taulbee acted as secretary in our secretary's absence. Seven members and one visitor answered to the roll call by telling what we enjoyed most this summer.

The assistant county agent gave a very interesting talk on the care and feeding of dairy cows in the winter. Old and new business was taken up by the club. Mrs. C. P. Zimmerly gave this month's lesson on taxation and government. The club then had a short recreation at time and refreshments were served by our hostess. The club adjourned to meet again on September 27 for a social meeting with Mrs. C. P. Zimmerly and our regular meeting will be held on October 11 at the home of Mrs. Ohio Roberts.

Special Service Planned
There will be a special service at the Hazel Street M. E. church at 3:30 p. m. Sunday, W. H. D. Bright, negro pastor, announced. All pastors and their members are urged to be present.

Revival at Ozan Closed by Picnic

Rev. S. A. Whitlow Honored by Ozan and Washington Congregations

After the close of the revival services conducted at the Ozan Baptist church, Tuesday night, a large number of the members of the Washington Baptist church and several members of the Washington Presbyterian church, attending the services, spread a surprise picnic supper on the church steps in honor of the Rev. S. A. Whitlow, pastor in charge of both the Ozan and Washington Baptist churches. Many delicious foods were spread and the entire group enjoyed the cats and the friendly association. Some of the food had to be returned to the baskets, perhaps because of the fullness of the divine, inspirational services preceding the supper. The congregation Tuesday night was one of the largest groups that have been present during the meeting. Choosing as his text, "God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom the world is crucified unto me, and I unto the world," (Gal. 6:14), the Rev. Whitlow preached a sermon so heart-touching that two young girls accepted Christ as their Savior, and expressed their desire to unite with the Ozan Baptist church. The meeting will probably close Wednesday or Thursday.

Nevada County Sing
The Nevada county singing convention will begin at Holly Spring church Sunday, September 19. The public is invited, according to W. H. Munn, president, and H. O. Herring, secretary.

Howard County Sing
The Howard county singing convention is to meet at County Line, seven miles out of Nashville on the DeQueen highway, the second Saturday night and Sunday in October, which will be October 9-10. All singers in Hempstead county are especially invited, according to Pearl Chesshir, secretary.

Antioch Sing
The annual singing will be held at Antioch, three miles east of Emmet, Sunday, September 19. All are invited to attend, bringing song-books and luncheon baskets.

Picnic Saturday for Tabernacle

Annual Sunday School Outing Is to Be Held at Fair Park

The Hope Gospel Tabernacle Sunday School will hold its annual Sunday school picnic Saturday at Fair Park. All members of the Sunday school are requested to plan to meet at the park at 10:30 Saturday morning. Those having no way to get out there should meet at the Tabernacle at 10 and a way will be provided for them to go out. The committees in charge are preparing some fine games and races and the losing Ambassadors are getting the lemonade ready. Every effort is being put forth to make the occasion a real time of enjoyment for those present.

STORIES IN STAMPS
HE'S HONEY-EATING FLYING PARSON
BACK in the timbered areas, and in the almost inaccessible brushlands of New Zealand, "down under," exists some of the most remarkable bird life of the world.
Certainly there is no more interesting bird than the Tui Parson, the honey-eater. He is a member of that great family characteristic of the Australian area. Equipped with a long, protrusible tongue, the parson bird obtains his honey supply at will along with whatever insects happen to be on the scene at the time.
The parson is a small bird and his habitat for the most part is restricted, though the white-throated honey-eater is found over most of Australia and Tasmania.
And he is well named. The parson boasts a beautiful dark plumage, relieved only by two tufts of white feathers beneath the chin. A close relative, oddly enough, is the pugnacious friar bird, also of New Zealand and Australia. The parson is portrayed on a New Zealand stamp issued in 1935.

Benton Team To Be In Shape for Game Friday Night

Panthers Ready for Hard Battle

Veteran Team Will Take Field Against Hope in Conference Game

BENTON, Ark.—Thirty members of the Benton Panthers football squad completed heavy drill work Wednesday afternoon before polishing off for the Hope Bobcats Friday night at Hope.

The game at Hope will be the Panthers' first contest of the season and one of six Arkansas conference games scheduled for Benton.

With 10 veterans from last year's team and an array of new material on hand, Coach Ben Means hopes to give Benton one of the best teams in recent years. The squad is expected to be in good shape for the Hope tussle.

The locals are figured to be on a par with the Hope squad. Weights are about the same, however, the Bobcats have played one game already this season. The game at Hope will be the first for the Panthers. A victory over the Bobcats would not be surprising to loyal followers of the Panthers.

Coach Ben Means announced that 22 members of his squad would make the trip to Hope. Nalley, a 190-pounder starting his first season, is expected to see action Friday in the tackle position.

The squad will be led by Capt. Leon Covey, center, and Sub-Captain Junior Jordan. Other lettermen who are expected to be in the line-up are Wyatt Crawford, Harvey Sweeten, Maurice Parker, Dodson Newcomb, O. Holder, David Cunningham, John Fleming and Horace Drennan.

The Panthers, who face one of the toughest schedules in history of the school, will play four conference teams in their first four games. Following the Hope game, they will play Forrest City here September 24, El Dorado there October 1, and Russellville there October 7. North Little Rock and Fordyce, the two other conference foes, will play here at later dates.

Hard Battle Expected
Coach Fay Hammons guarded against possible injury to his team as he sent the squad through a brisk work-out Wednesday afternoon. The team is in pretty good shape and expects a tough battle here Friday night, Hammons said.

"The Benton team, they tell me, is big and powerful. They will be hard to push around with 10 veterans in there. We expect a hard game," the Bobcat coach said.

Hammons plans on sending practically the same squad against Benton that started in the first game here last week against Florio which includes Reese and Ramsey at ends, Stone and Quimby at tackles, Wilson and Keith at guards, Bright, Parsons, Eason and Aslin in the backfield.

The game will start promptly at 8 p. m. The officials will be announced Friday.

DeQueen Meets Waldron in Opening Grid Game

DE QUEEN, Ark.—The De Queen High School football squad worked out under the lights Tuesday night for the first time this season, in preparation for the opening game with Waldron here Friday night.

Nine letter men reported to Coach Criswell at the start of the season, and a squad of about 30 has been working out daily since the opening of school.

The letter men are: David Young, Jake Thomas, Gene Gardner, Dorris Kelly and Wilburn Lemley, linemen; R. W. Hendricks, Johnny Kyle, John Wiley Pafford and Derrell Aubrey, backs.

New uniforms of orange and black have been obtained. The 60-piece De Queen school band, organized after the football season last year, is expected to add to the interest of the game.

'Moaningest' Grid Coach Is Sought

Newspaper Offers $500 for Winner of 'Blues' Contest

SPOKANE, Wash.—(P)—Who is the nation's "moaningest" football coach? That's what the Spokane athletic round table wants to know. And it announced a contest today to find out an honest-to-goodness contest with $500 worth of athletic equipment for the winner.

"This is no small fry competition," said Joseph A. Albi, president of the round table. A little thing like a 28-game losing streak isn't going to take the money from such old-time dark blues crooners as 'Blomic Gil' Dobie or Gus Dorais.

Invitations to join the Chorus. Lolooso have been sent to 202 of the nation's college coaches. Albi said they must mean their moans by October 9.

"Have your backs lost their ankles?" asks the invitations. Is Charley Horse playing end? Did the guards graduate? The tackles flunk? Has the faculty found the center is a Blues-beard with a schoolboy complexion? "Sit right down and write that tear-stained letter."

Blevins High School on Bearden Schedule

BEARDEN, Ark.—Bearden High School will open its 1937 football season Friday night at Warren against the Lumberjacks. Coach Irving Wilson has 22 out for practice, including eight letter men. The latter are: Albert Merritt, captain; Reed Daniels, Robert Watt, Jack Daniels, Frank Priddy, Lender Launius, Willard Stoker and Lee Reddin.

The schedule:
September 17—Warren there.
September 24—Monticello (site undecided).
October 1—Gurdon there.
October 8—Dermott (site undecided).
October 15—Sheridan here.
October 22—Stephens here.
October 29—Perryville there.
November 5—Blevins here.
November 12—School for Deaf at Little Rock.
November 19—Benton there.

CAST OF CHARACTERS
PRISCILLA PIERCE—heroine, young woman attorney.
AMY KERR—Cilly's roommate and murderer's victim.
JIM KERRIGAN—Cilly's fiancé.
HARRY HUTCHINS—Amy's strange visitor.
SERGEANT DOLAN—officer assigned to solve the murder of Amy Kerr.

Yesterday! Alone in her apartment, after midnight, Cilly becomes increasingly alarmed when Amy fails to return from the rooftop. She recalls it would be terrifying up there in the darkness!

CHAPTER II
CILLY'D been up there once herself—to get a coat she had had hanging out all day to air.

You ran up the five flights of stairs—that was all right, for there were lights on every landing. But from there on it was No-Man-Land. You went up the other half-flight to the roof, and pushed the heavy iron door out. As you stepped out onto the roof, that door swung shut behind you with a bang—a loud, terrifying bang against the lonely silence on the roof.

Cilly was a courageous soul, but she had shuddered that first black moment after the door slammed behind her. There was nothing ahead but dark emptiness. The clothesline was just a few steps beyond the doorway, but in the darkness it seemed a mile away.

You picked your steps carefully, expecting any moment to trip over the raised platform under the lines; you held your hand out in front so that you wouldn't walk blindly into radio aerials. At every step you stumbled over a clothespin or a piece of rope.

There were the tall stacks, too: two from the furnace, and one from the incinerator which belched fire and brimstone into the black air above. At every step, you wondered just who or what lurked behind the next step. Not anything human, of course. You knew that.

If you met anyone on the roof, it would be poor old Mr. Johnson, the superintendent, dragged from his bed to check up on someone's aerial. And Mr. Johnson was a harmless soul.

But you didn't think of Mr. Johnson as you stepped out toward the clothesline. You thought of Dracula, and at every step you expected to see him before you, his black cape spread out bat-like, ready to enfold you. You thought of Dracula, and quickened your steps so that you stumbled, and as you stumbled you felt the monster upon you. . . .

You remembered all the stories you ever heard about ghosts that rise in graveyards at midnight. You remembered them all in the 10 or 20 seconds it took to cross from the heavy iron door to the clothesline. And because those 10 seconds seemed like 10 long, dreary years, you hurried as fast as ever you could; you grabbed that dress or coat down from the line with small regard for flying clothespins; and you fairly flew back to the big heavy door, lest Mr. Johnson come up and lock it for the night, and leave you out in that intense blackness until morning.

THIRTY seconds it took, at the most, to rush over to that clothesline and back. You didn't linger. Cilly hadn't lingered, and Cilly was as brave as the average. Even a little more brave than Amy. Amy would not come home alone evenings when Cilly had to work late. She didn't like to be alone in the apartment. She said so.

No, Amy wasn't the sort to linger in the terrifying blackness of the roof at midnight—not if she were alone.

Then Amy wasn't alone. It was all poppycock about wanting to air her blue dress. Amy was going up on the roof to meet someone. Who?

Harry Hutchins had left 10 minutes earlier than Jim. Amy could have walked down to the vestibule if she wanted to be alone with him. And given Jim a few minutes to say goodnight to her, Cilly.

But Amy had waved Harry out with a nonchalant air, and she had waited around with Jim and Cilly. She didn't even excuse herself and pretend that she was going to bed. She just waited around until Jim that dress or coat down from the line with small regard for flying clothespins; and you fairly flew back to the big heavy door, lest Mr. Johnson come up and lock it for the night, and leave you out in that intense blackness until morning.

So Cilly was annoyed at Amy. Annoyed and not a little hurt. They had gotten along so happily together. Up until tonight, Amy had never shown any trace of selfishness or pettiness. Cilly had really loved her. Was Amy at last showing her true colors?

So Cilly was annoyed at Amy. Annoyed and not a little hurt. They had gotten along so happily together. Up until tonight, Amy had never shown any trace of selfishness or pettiness. Cilly had really loved her. Was Amy at last showing her true colors?

... Cilly was going to sleep. But of course she didn't. As soon as her head touched the pillow, she knew that she wouldn't get to sleep for hours. When you're unhappy, sleep doesn't come immediately to slip you quietly into oblivion. You have to smooth out your thoughts first. You have to banish ugly suspicions, and bitterness, and jealousy.

Cilly tried to do that. She honestly did try to realize that Amy was a dear, that she was honest and fair and altogether too kind-hearted to hurt anyone. Besides, Cilly told herself sternly: "You're a pretty poor sort to build up such a case against Jim the very first time another girl looks at him. What a jealous, nagging wife you'll be!"

Then, quite unexpectedly, she realized what had happened. She realized how utterly silly she had been. It was all so very simple. The big black door had slammed shut while Amy was hanging up her dress. Sunday was Mr. Johnson's day off, but he always returned about midnight and made the regular rounds of the house. He had locked Amy out!

All this time that she had been painting a devil in her imagination, Amy had been up on that terrifying roof alone—locked out!

Cilly jumped out of bed, slipped on her shoes without her stockings, and took her coat out of the closet. She'd go right up and unlatch the door. Poor Amy. . . .

Cilly stopped, clutching the coat in her hands. Her heart turned to ice in her breast. For the still night air was suddenly shattered by a wild, terrifying cry—the deathly, agonized cry of a human being.

Shrill and high-pitched, it pierced the midnight quiet for an eternal second, then died down to a rasping, choking murmur. A moment of silence followed—a silence so intense that it could be felt in every nerve.

Then there was a dull thud outside Cilly's bedroom window—a heavy, swift thud, as if something had fallen a long way. . . .

In an instant, Cilly was at the window, and as she looked out, she forgot the six-foot drop to the ground, she forgot that she was clad only in pajamas and shoes. She jumped quickly; she knelt beside that crushed, broken figure that had come hurtling from the roof.

"Amy!" she cried. "Amy!" But Amy Kerr was beyond all hearing.

Vaguely, Cilly was conscious of windows being raised along the street, of heads craning out, inquiring the trouble. She looked down at this twisted, broken body that had only a few minutes ago been a lovely, lively girl. Amy still clutched the blue dress in one hand. The other hand, clenched in the terror of death, slowly relaxed; a slip of newspaper fluttered to the ground. Cilly picked it up, unthinking, and tucked it into her pajama pocket.

Little Rock Loses to Pelicans, 8-2

Crackers Even Series With Win Over Memphis Chicks

LITTLE ROCK—(P)—The New Orleans Pelicans took advantage of Little Rock misuses Wednesday night to defeat the Travelers, 8 to 2, and even at one-all their Shaughnessy playoff series.

Hugo Klaerner, Pel hurler, allowed nine hits but was invincible with men on bases. The Travelers got three doubles and a triple.

Five hits and four Traveler errors in the fifth clinched the game for New Orleans and broke up a pitching duel between Bob Porter, ace of the Little Rock staff, and Klaerner. New Orleans was leading 1 to 0 at the time.

George singled to start the big inning and Klamer sacrificed. Irwin singled to left and Galatzer got a hit to center, scoring George. Irwin scored on Weatherly's single. Carson walked. Art Graham dropped Shilling's fly. Galatzer scoring, then threw wild to third. Weatherly scoring. Grimes walked. Carson scored when Midkiff, who relieved Sharpe, threw wild to first, then Shilling tallied when O'Neill overthrew home plate. Grimes scored as George grounded out. Klamer whiffed to end the inning.

Dec Froth, Little Rock manager, used four hurlers, less than a hit, played Thursday night, and two pinch hitters to no avail. Approximately 4500 were in the stands.

Further shifting of his veterans has brought in Julie Gernand, 190-pound junior, from an end to tackle with Harvey Blue, veteran 210-pounder, slated for the other post.

Jennings plans to spring a sophomore guard sensation on the boys before the season folds, predicting big things for Bobby Taylor, 185-pounder who tore up the premises in spring drills. Until he has proved his worth the veteran lettermen, Emmett Kriel and Foster Coleman, will flank the center—which is a position Jennings wishes you wouldn't pring up.

Two sophomores look like they will be doing most of the pivot play—Hoyt Williams and Sherill Bailey, rugged, 190-pounders but with a minimum of experience. If they show signs of weakening, still another soph, 180-pound Gerald McCarver, will be around.

Along with Patterson, Jennings described Bubba Gernand, 180, and Carl Brull, 185, as "dead cinches" for backfield posts. Gernand, a field goal specialist who finished third in the conference scoring in '36, will be at halfback with Brazell in the full-back slot.

Scrapping it out for the other berth, alarmingly vacant since graduation of Bob Masters, are Ted Lewellen, Fred Graham and Norvin Wood, the latter a letterman—the other two squadmen.

Sophomore backs who could come through include Durham Bivens, a likely transfer from Kemper Military Academy who does considerable passing and kicking; Malcolm Linder, a fast stepper, W. J. Wimpee and Elwin Williams.

Thomsen Plans on Super Air Attack

Fans Last Year Saw Only Prelude to New Aerial Circus

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark.—(P)—South-west Conference football fans who marvelled last year at the "shower" of footballs turned loose by University of Arkansas backfield men may have just seen the prelude to the big show.

In the first ten days of training this season, Coach Fred C. Thomsen has concentrated on the development of a "super-aerial attack."

The new "circus" will feature two ace flingers—Quarterback Jack Robbin and Halfback Dwight Sloan—both assured of starting backfield assignments and having opposing linemen to solve as they charge in the question of "who's throwing it this time?"

Halfback Lloyd Montgomery and Fullback Marion Fletcher probably will round out the backfield giving it an average of 185 pounds.

Other ball voters who will see plenty of action are Ralph Atwood, Ralph Rawlings, Ray Cole, Neil Martin, Frank Mosely, Floyd Lyons, Kay Eakin and Walter Hamburg.

Franc's Drop Puts France in Crisis

Bad Trade Balance and Mediterranean Threat Are Blamed

PARIS, France.—(AP)—A fresh plunge of the franc to its lowest level in nearly a decade Wednesday night raised the acute political question of exchange control, which in many French minds is associated with economic dictatorship.

From its opening at 28.04 francs to the dollar to a close of 29.35, the franc fell steadily throughout the day. The government's currency stabilization fund, which had lost heavily in a previous attempt to check the franc's fall, dropped out of the market. It was said the fund's directors had decided to give the franc more freedom. They predicted it would fall to 30 to the dollar.

Adverse Balance in Trade Expected

But Much of It Is for Raw Materials, to Be Re-shipped Later

By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON.—Just because the United States had an "adverse" balance of trade in 1936 and expects another one for 1937 is no reason for business men to start jumping off bridges.

Many economists refuse to call it an "adverse" or unfavorable balance of trade. Instead they call it an "import surplus." The department of commerce insists it should be simply an "unbalance of payments," since only part of it represents a trade in goods, shipping services, interest and dividends and tourist expenditures enter into it.

But the fact remains that in 1936, for the first time in decades, the United States had an import surplus. It amounted to $153,000,000. Even so it exported $340,000,000 more of actual goods than it imported. The deficit came in such items as American tourist expenditures abroad, services of foreign ships in carrying American produce, and other "invisibles." Total exports, goods, services and all were $3,483,000,000.

Bigger One Next Year

There will be a larger unbalance of payments in 1937. The department of commerce reports there is already this year a surplus of more than $140,000,000 in imports of actual goods over exports.

The amount of tourist expenditures abroad, shipping service charges and other "invisibles" so far this year is not known. The department believes it is far in excess of the amount payable to the United States, so the "adverse" balance of trade will be fairly imposing, perhaps several hundreds of millions.

But the appearance of an "adverse" balance of trade does not mean that the republic is falling. England has had an adverse balance of trade in her commerce for generations. It has made up the difference by supplying shipping services and capital to other countries, while at the same time enticing tourists to spend lavishly in dear old England.

Foreign nations in debt to the United States can pay only in goods or service. And they can not amass a margin to pay the debts if they are required to buy from the United States as much as they sell it.

A Sign of Good Times

Of course there are boat loads of arguments on both sides of the question as to whether a permanent "favorable" balance of trade is beneficial to a nation.

The department of commerce supplies information helping to throw a favorable light on the present trade deficit. This country is better off, so is able to buy more abroad. One of the indications of good times here is the increase in American tourist travel abroad.

Then, too, currency devaluations abroad have reduced the cost to America of foreign goods. Because these prices are low, American manufacturers are buying foreign raw materials heavily. Ultimately foreign prices are sure to rise, so American manufacturers, with supplies of cheaper raw material bought in advance, can undersell foreign goods later.

It is noteworthy, in support of this, that the principal increase in imports to this country is in raw materials, such as rubber, part of which will be later exported as finished goods.

The department of commerce insists also that the trade pact is helping break down trade barriers, but that is something likely to be a subject of political wars for years to come.

Takes Over Eleanor's Titles

Erna Kompa, above, has taken over Eleanor Holm Jarrett's two titles—Queen of the Bathing Beauties and Queen of the Backstroke Artists. The comely young New York miss won the U. S. backstroke championship, vacated by Mrs. Jarrett, at the National A. A. U. women's swimming meet and, of course, it was a foregone conclusion that Erna was the most beautiful competitor.

litans. Preble ordered Decatur to man this craft with 70 men and five officers, enter the harbor and destroy the Philadelphia. In February 1804, conveyed by the U. S. S. Siren, the little Intrepid (as the ketch had been christened) entered the harbor by night, the Siren standing far off shore. Decatur's men were kept below hatches, only a small squad dressed in native costume remained on deck to work the vessel. The native pilot shouted to the crew aboard the Philadelphia that he had lost his anchors. He asked permission to tie up to the frigate. Lines were passed, the Intrepid ranged alongside, and at a signal the Americans burst from the hatches, swarmed aboard the big warship, overpowered the crew, and set the vessel thoroughly alight.

The job was done under the guns of other shipping in harbor and of the fort, and as the Philadelphia blazed to her grave, the Intrepid slipped safely out of the harbor and reached the open sea.

That summer Preble's squadron executed an effective blockade of Tripoli and attacked the city by sea four times. Land forces under the quixotic and redoubtable Connecticut Yankee consult, William Eaton, swept westward along the coast from Alexandria, took the town of Derna and threatened the native ruler. At sea, convoy work and frequent combats proved to the corsairs that the Americans were more than their match in the brutal business of hand-to-hand fighting as well as the delicate business of conveying ships and serving guns. One by one, all four northern African powers, Morocco, Algeria, Tunisia and Tripoli had enough.

"That all the (European) maritime powers," writes the English historian Stanley Lane-Poole, "should have cowered and cringed as they did before the heroic age of the Corsairs, and should have suffered their trade to be harassed, their lives menaced and their honor stained by a series of insolent savagery... seems absolutely incredible and yet is literally true. Hot Springs had to be appraised, and it was necessary for the governor to make amends for the gambling paraphernalia which he had a few months ago destroyed. Just what that trade was I do not know, but I do know that the same gambling operations are being carried on at Hot Springs today as before the spectacular raid, and Governor Bailey is responsible for conditions that now exist. Just what he is to receive from it is for you to decide. The mayor says he is to receive the votes—others say there were other considerations.

"The proud boast of Governor Bailey is that he will destroy any man who opposes him as he did the gamblers at Hot Springs in January of this year. If gambling was then 'morally wrong and economically unsound,' tell the people, Governor Bailey, why it is not equally true today."

HELP 15 MILES OF KIDNEY TUBES

To Flush out Acids and Other Poisonous Waste

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 Miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. Most people pass about 8 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the beginning of leading backache, rheumatic pains, lumbago, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headache and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills. They give happy relief and will help the 15 Miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.
